Po. Same as usual. I can hear him run through the barracks. Knowing well what he was doing, I ran out quickly following him.

"JUSTICE!" I hear him shout. "Is about to be served!" When I caught up, Po was jumping through the trees. The rest of the five soon joined me and we raced our way towards Po, who was now going rooftop to rooftop.

"WA-HOO!" Po soon jumped onto a tree that launched him to the clouds.

"That looks like fun." Mantis chuckled.

"Come on we can still catch him." I told them, and soon, after a few more minutes of running, we all landed...at the noodle shop.

"We'll have two justice platters please" Po told his father.

"Three" Monkey told him.

"A bowl of dumplings too, please." Viper told Mr. Ping.

"And the Spicy noodles for Tigress." Po said. "Did you want extra sauce with that?" Po asked me.

"She wants it on the side." Monkey told him, but Po still waited.

"On the side." I confirmed crossing my arms.

"On the side" Po told hi dad.

"That was awesome!" Po shouted as we sat down.

"We do it every other day Po" I reminded him.

"Yeah but you guys were right on my tail this time." Po said excitedly.

"Remember when we chased Tigress?" Monkey asked.

"Are you really bringing this up today Monkey?" I glared.

"That chase was hilarious." Mantis joined. "We weren't even half way here and Po had caught up with you already."

"Can we not talk about this?" Po asked as I looked at Monkey and Mantis angrily.

"You two even kissed when you got here." Monkey and Mantis laughed.

"That was an accident!" Po and I stood angrily.

"Alrighty," Mr. Ping came over with our food. "Three bowls of Justice Platters, a bowl of dumplings and a bowl of Spice Noodles with extra sauce on the side." He placed them on the table.

"Thanks dad" Po told him as we sat back down.

"Enjoy kids." Mr. Ping headed towards the kitchen.

"Saved by the food." Monkey smirked.

"Too bad we couldn't go into more detail." Mantis added.

"That's it." I got up ready to end him but Po held me back.

"He's just teasing Tigress." Po held me by my shoulders causing me to sit back down.

"If he keeps going, I swear I'll-"

"He'll stop." Po interrupted. " ." Po glared at him. Mantis only nodded nervously. About 15 minutes or so later we raced back to the palace, Po high fiving some civilians as he ran.

"Yeee-Haww!" Po shouted landing in a pose in front of us. "You guys aren't doing the Dramatic pose are you?"

"Do we have to strike a pose every time we land?" Mantis asked him.

"Guys!" Po turned to us. "Never underestimate, the power of a dramatic entrance." He stayed on guard as he climbed the stairs. "I've heard about some masters who win a fight by just throwing open a door!" He tried to kick the training hall doors opened until..."Ooo, Ma-Master Shifu" Po exclaimed lowering his foot.

"Dramatic Entrance?" Shifu asked him.

"Master Shifu"

"The Dragon Warrior is correct."

"Really?" Po looked surprised and turned to us briefly. "I was just thinking...I mean...yeah. I am" he agreed.

"Before the Battle of the fist, comes the battle of the mind." He held his staff. "Hence, The Dramatic Entrance." He dramatically opened the training hall doors. Upon opening them, about a dozen arrows fired from the sidelines making large pits of coal light up into flames. Shifu turned to us with a light smirk on his face.

"Woah!" Po exclaimed excitedly as we followed behind. I had to admit it was pretty impressive. "Nice Dramatic Entrance. What's the occasion?" He finally asked.

"Today...will be my final class." Wait what? I looked over and noticed Po go over to him.

"Your final-" Po ran to him. "Wait...I didn't even know you were sick!" Po exclaimed. "Although you have been looking a little-"

"I'm not sick." Shifu shoved him off.

"Healthy" Po corrected himself. "A lot actually."

"My final class because..." He walked towards us. "From now on your training will be in the hands of the Dragon Warrior." Well this is going to go down quickly. Not that I do not trust Po being our Master but...last time Po tried to give us classes for fun...wasn't so much fun.

"WHAT?!" Po yelled in so much shock that literally blew Shifu a few feet away. He quickly scooted over to Shifu. "Who? Me? Teach? I mean why not Tigress? She's always telling everyone what to do." He 'whispered'.

"Be quiet Po." I glared.

"See what I mean?" Po looked back at Shifu.

"Tigress is not the Dragon Warrior. You are." He pointed at Po once again with his staff.

"Come on!" Po groaned gesturing to us once again. "They're the five. What can I teach them?" Po turned back around.

"There is always something more to learn. Even for a master." He calmly stated. "For instance, let me show you another move;" he flipped the staff a few times. "The Dramatic Exit. What's that?!" He pointed towards the ceiling causing us all to look. But as soon as I heard little feet walking away I saw that he was walking out quickly as he could.

"Woah!" Po looked back down after a while. "Are you kidding me?" He looked behind him. "Where did he go?"

"Master!" We bowed.

"He's gone guys it's cool." Po scoffed.

"We await your instructions master." Monkey punched his hand again.

"All you have to lose; is our respect." I looked up at him with a smirk.

"Seriously, how bad can it be?" Mantis crawled onto Po's shoulder.

"Yeah..." Po smiled nervously. "I suppose you're right."

"Just relax Po." Viper told him. I walked over to him and gave him a reassuring smile.

"We'll do fine. It's like regular training." I told him.

"What if you burst into flames?" He asked. Now that I think about it, I don't believe I have ever been on fire but I suppose he's right.

"How about...we begin slowly." I suggested.

"What do you mean?"

"We go to our regular training session and you just tell us which moves to use. Afterall you've been into Kung Fu since you were 18 you know every move."

"Yeah..." Po smiled a bit. "That'll make it easier. Alright everyone, let's get this training session started."

>Well what you guys think? Let me know if you're confused in at any part.

2. Training

Chapter 2 is done and ready to read. Came out shorter than I wanted it to but I like that way it ended. Hope you like it too.

>"Okay okay. Let's switch it up!" Po called out after a few failed attempts on the rest of the five. "Monkey! Immobile mountain stance!"

"Yes Master" I heard him respond before hearing a few grunts.

"I lean...uh...Tigress!" He turned to me as I punched the Guanet Warriors. "Tornado back flip!" He ordered. That doesn't seem like a good idea right now but I followed none the less.

"Yes Master." I jumped into the air only to crash into one of the Seven Clubs of Oblivion. I was able to land on all fours before noticing my tail was on fire.

"Fire!" Po yelled.

"Fire!" I heard a few geese right before they fired the arrows one landing on my butt. I had to admit that stung.

"Sorry! My fault!" Po said a bit of a panicked tone. "Crane go high! I mean low!"

"Aww my claw thingy" Mantis yowled when Crane fell on him.

"Uh...Viper and Tigress do like a total poison technique." He told us as I ran on one of the spirals from the Seven Clubs of Oblivion while Viper stood on my head. "Uh...you two do a swarming exist bite with uh..." I couldn't stand any longer as fire blew right towards us. I tried to avoid it but instead I fell backwards. I did not hear what Po had said next because once I feel my fur had caught fire, Crane had crashed into Monkey making his head get stuck on his hat, Monkey hurt his arm, Mantis got knocked out by one of the seven clubs and Viper got tied around a guanet warrior when I crashed into her, hurting my arm but getting most of the fire out. We soon climbed out of the training area and walked over to Po.
>"Good job Po." Viper tried to be supportive. I stopped Po as he tried to put out the fire in my ear.

"Did you at least learn something?" Po asked.

"Yes." I glared putting out the fire on my ear. "That you can't teach."

"And Tigress is flammable. Turns out." Po looked at us with a frown and not soon afterwards part of the ceiling fell.

"You guys are dismissed." Po said nervously.

"I'll go get the medic." Crane stated as he and Monkey walked out with Mantis on his tail. Viper followed not long after.

"I really can't teach huh?" Po looked at me.

"Not really." I looked at him.

"I didn't think you would be flammable." He looked at me. "Do you think I'm flammable." He walked towards the burning guanet warriors but I grabbed him by the ears.

"Don't even think about it." I dragged him outside as he complained.

"Hehe.. you still care." He rubbed his ears once we were outside and I had let go.

"Don't push it Po." Po sighed.

"Yeah well...I'm done."

"With what?"

"Teaching that class was humiliating." He sat down on the floor. I smiled lightly before sitting beside him.

"You've been humiliated worst than that Po." Po smiled lightly before looking at me.

"Aren't you supposed to be making me feel better about myself right now?" He smirked. I smiled at him lightly.

"You'll get better. In time." I stood.

"You're going to complain to Shifu aren't you?" I turned to him and noticed he had a slight smirk.

"What makes you think that?"

"I can tell by your posture." Po stood. I smiled lightly at him before turning away.

"We'll see won't we?"

>"I don't know how you could of thought of putting him in charge father." I stood behind Shifu. His back was turned as he stood in on his staff.

"He'll improve Tigress." He told me calmly.

"I know he will but I got all burnt, Crane nearly broke his neck, Viper was tied like a knot on the guanet warriors, Monkey almost broke his arm and Mantis was unconscious at the end of it. It was humiliating!" I almost screamed. Shifu turned to me and jumped off the staff and walked towards me.

"Why don't you help him tomorrow? I'm sure with your help he'll improve." He walked off.

"Why would he improve with my help?" I asked myself.

"He just will!" I heard Shifu down the hall. Not long after I heard the rest of the five talking with him.
